

Art-U room is pleased to present the gallery's first solo exhibition by Malaysian visual artist Chang Yoong Chia.

Entitled "Body of Water", the exhibition consists of seventeen new works—sixteen oil paintings and one sculpture using driftwood. Employing an allegorical style, Chang depicts a variety of topics, ranging from his memories and childhood fantasies to topics related to Malaysian history and current affairs. Closer inspection reveals that the works all share a connection with water. Viewers are invited to join in an imaginary journey involving a body of water that changes its form as it moves from location to location. Leading the way, the water transforms its appearance as it circulates and permeates different places—becoming the ocean that the artist's ancestors crossed when they migrated to Malaysia, or the rivers and waterfalls flowing through primeval inland forest, or the squalls and humidity that are unique to tropical regions.

'An Artist's Life' 2015, Oil on canvas, 66x85cm

Chang's past works include 'Quilt of the Dead' (2002~ongoing), in which he mourns for complete strangers found in newspaper obituary columns by embroidering portraits of the deceased onto pieces of cotton with the goal of creating a quilt, and his 'Immortal Beloved' series (2012~2013), which employs collages made of postage stamps in order to trace the lives of ordinary people who lived in the past. By shining light on such unsung individuals, these works give a sense of Chang's stance, reexamining the significance and ambiguity of historical events by reconstructing their narratives through an excavation of fragments of memories from people who had been buried by the shadow of the larger narrative of history. Chang was born in the multiethnic nation of Malaysia as a member of the Chinese diaspora, and this process may also incorporate the story of his search for his own identity.
